Not illustrated. 1899 Excerpt: .at the next meeting, which is to be held in Hsiao-chang on the first of April, 1900. On the Easter Sunday which followed the meeting of the Union the usual quarterly meeting was held in the P ang-ehuang chapel, the ten delegates from abroad mainly conducting the services so far as speaking is concerned. Thirty-six were received upon probation, representing seven counties, and thirty-one to the church. The number of communicants present was 333, and the attendants were from twelve different districts, or counties. It was felt, by all that this easy step in advance is a highly important one, and that if it had been taken ten years ago it would have been even better. Are there not many regions where the time is ripe for a better and a closer understanding between contiguous workers? A. H. S. ffla publications, flreebpterian flDission piess. International Law.
