That Gentile soldier had shown what was then the rare and splendid virtue of loving the Jewish nation, and he had expressed his affection by building the beautiful synagogue, whose ruins, as many believe, are to-day to be seen on the northern shores of Galilee. This Roman had come to revere the Israelite faith; his heart was drawn out to that wondrous people who taught this noble monotheism, and he became in some measure a Jewish patriot. He who thus built for the fair and busy Capernaum, which was then his home, a noble house of worship, was the humble successor to the Pericles who adorned the Athenian Acropolis, and the precursor of the many who, through later ages, in Italy, Germany, France, Scotland, and New England, have shown their love to city or nation by the building of libraries and hospitals, churches and schools, orphanages and monuments, model lodging-houses, museums and fountains. There is no civic virtue more urgently demanded in American life to-day than a wise patriotism, especially that form of public spirit which Mr. Franklin MacVeagh, of our city, has called municipal patriotism. The latter was the original type of this noble virtue. The enthusiasm of the Jew was largely a zeal for his capital city. From Babylonian exile he sent his faithful cry across the desert: If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, may my right hand forget its cunning.
