The Inner one incloses a similar nucleus, but it is considerably smaller and paler in colour. Closely connected with the inferior surface of the White stratum, which is prolonged from the Peduncles of the Brain Proper on each side (see p. 132), there is a mass of a substance, apparendy composed of plates and fibres of OrangeWhite and Greyish-Brown Nervous Matter, intimately in. termixed and closely compacted together. This mass extends, from opposite the posterior margin of the Peduncles behind, to the Anterior Commissure of the Brain before. The Tractus Opticus runs along its inferior surface, towards the Median Plane, and external to this, it is only separated from the Anterior Lateral Part of the Central Fissure, by a layer of Orange-White Matter, about a fortieth part of an inch in thickness. The laminae and filaments of OrangeWhite Matter which are found in...
