Excerpt: .fortrps, to be lowered only as the last act of surrender. It was this love for the flag which inspired that ringing order from your own heroic Dix: If any man attempt to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot. It was this love for the flag, which flung it to the breeze over the rebellious city of New Orleans, on the anniversary of Washington s birth-day, beneath which an hundred armed men held a mob at bay and kept it flying, until the going down of the sun. It was this love for the flag, which warmed the breast of that brave soldier at Vicksburg, who, when his comrades deserted him, refused to retrace his steps and planting his colors within twenty yards of the enemy s rifle pits, stood by them all the day long. It wa9 this love for...
