In early days, the Ream men were all great hunters --strong, fearless ai. d daring. When they arrived in Fairfield County they were the sixth family of white settlers. The Indian villages were not entirely broken up where Lancaster is. Jacob Ream, half-brother to Abraham, came a little later-- four years, I think. He located south of Reams mill, about one mile. Jacob L. Ream, who died recently, was his son. The Ream family was very numerous, and are widely intermarried, so that in that region, now, almost every third person one meets can claim relationship to them. Of Sampson Reams family, there are but three out of thirteen living. Two died in the Mexican war, and one in California. Of the sons-in-law of Abraham Ream, two yet survive --Aneshensel and Hershberger. The first winter the family were here they killed eighteen bears and...
